From NACD Directorship: Think Like an Activist Investor

The National Association of Corporate Directors has made available a complimentary article titled “In Practice: How to Think Like an Activist Investor,” a feature in the organization’s NACD Directorship magazine.

“Too often, boards realize too late that the battle for their company has already begun—and they are ill-prepared and outflanked,” NACD says.

This article in the latest issue of NACD Directorship magazine provides directors with recommendations that can help boards to enhance their readiness, protect their reputation, and better represent the interests of their shareholders.

NACD Directorship magazine is an exclusive benefit of NACD membership, but this article is being made available to the public to sample the valuable insights NACD provides to its members.
