Guidelines for GDPR Compliance in Third-Party Contracts

General Data Protection Regulation requirements might look like a new bureaucratic threshold for doing business in the European Union. But sooner or later, a strict regulation in this area is likely to occur in every country, points out Vladislav Nekrutenko in an article for IoT Evolution.

The acceptance of the California Consumer Privacy Act 2018 and the Brazil Personal Data Protection Law are good examples in this regard, he explains.

His article details some steps that can help a company fulfill its obligations in contracts with third parties and mitigate risks regarding third parties' data misuse.

Read the article.