

In-House Lawyer Killed in 'Targeted' Shooting in Broad Daylight

Atlanta police say Trinh Huynh, an attorney with UPS, was singled out and targeted before she was shot and killed on her way to work, according to a report in The Atlanta Journal-Constitution.

A suspect has been arrested in connection with the murder of Huynh, who escaped from Vietnam as a child with her family. She was a graduate of Princeton University and Emory University School of Law. Besides working for UPS, she provided pro bono legal services to immigrants, a local television station reported.

A police spokesman said surveillance footage shows the suspect, Raylon Browning, calmly approaching Huynh before the shooting and then briefly running afterward, before slowing down and walking away.
