

In-House Roundtable: How Technology, Legal Ops and Law Firm Disruption are Impacting Corporate Legal

General Counsel News and Quovant, in conjunction with Duff & Phelps, will present a complimentary CLE breakfast in San Mateo, CA, designed exclusively for in-house counsel and corporate executives. The event will be Nov. 3, 9-11 a.m. at the San Mateo Marriott.

Participants and industry experts will discuss how changes in legal spend and matter management techniques and technology are revolutionizing how corporate legal departments think about managing themselves, legal spend and outside counsel. The questions that the session will address include, “how much can machines do for us, and how much do we want them to do?”

The session format intentionally avoids “presentations.” Instead this will be a guided discussion around provocative and thought provoking questions posed by next generation technology and shifts in the corporate legal landscape.

Leaders of the discussion will include such experts as publisher of the Annual Law Department Operations Survey Brad Blickstein; David Cambria, Global Director of Operations – Law, Compliance and Government Relations at Archer Daniels Midland; and Jeff Hodge, who has more than 25 years of experience with corporate legal departments and corporate legal software providers, and has led standards initiatives involving LEDES and UTBMS. Special guests will join, based on their availability.

Register for the event.
