

Jeffrey Simon Honored Among Texas Legal Trailblazers for Work in Ongoing Opioid Litigation

Dallas-based trial lawyer was first in Texas to file lawsuit against opioid drug manufacturers and distributors

DALLAS – In recognition of his leadership role in the state's ongoing opioid multidistrict litigation (MDL), Simon Greenstone Panatier, P.C., founding partner Jeffrey Simon has been named a 2020 Texas Trailblazer by Texas Lawyer magazine.

Simon serves as chairman of the Texas Opioid MDL Plaintiffs Steering Committee, which seeks to hold drug manufacturers and supply chain corporations responsible for their roles in creating and prolonging the opioid epidemic in Texas.

Prior to the coronavirus outbreak, Simon was selected to be one of the lead attorneys to represent Dallas County in the state's first opioid trial. That trial has been scheduled for September 2021.

He is a frequent speaker on opioid topics and has served as co-chair of the Opioid Litigation Conference. The seminar, held each of the last three years, brings together leading medical, legal, and law enforcement experts to discuss how to best address and reduce the social and economic devastation of opioid addiction.

The revered toxic tort and pharmaceutical injury litigation attorney is a past president of the Texas Trial Lawyers Association and the Dallas Trial Lawyers Association. He is on the Board of Governors of the American Association for Justice, is a longtime Fellow of the American Board of Trial

Advocates, and is a member of the Trial Lawyers for Public Justice.
