A federal judge questioned the Obama administration's "good faith" in helping keep former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton's emails secret for six years and said he may end up issuing a subpoena to force her to turn over her entire account to the government, The Washington Times reports.

Judge Emmet G. Sullivan said he will grant limited discovery to Judicial Watch, a conservative legal group that has sued to get a look at Clinton's emails.

"That could give the group — and the broader public — answers as to who approved Mrs. Clinton's unique arrangement, who else in government knew about it and why they shielded it for so long," the report says. "It also could force Mrs. Clinton to answer questions about how she sorted through her account and decided which messages she didn't want to turn over to the government."
