Kenneth J. Nunnenkamp Joins Blank Rome as International Trade Partner in D.C.

Blank Rome LLP has added Kenneth J. Nunnenkamp as a partner in its Washington, D.C., office, where he will join the firm's International Trade practice group. Nunnenkamp brings nearly four decades of experience in national security and international trade, including a strong focus on Committee on Foreign Investment in the United States (CFIUS) reviews, export controls, and sanctions compliance.

Previously with Morgan Lewis, where he led the firm's CFIUS working group, Nunnenkamp has represented clients across various industries and countries in foreign investment reviews. He is ranked by Chambers and recognized by Foreign Investment Watch, where he also serves on the advisory board.

His work includes extensive representation before federal agencies, including the Departments of Justice, State, Commerce, Treasury, and Homeland Security, in matters involving trade enforcement, sanctions, and export regulations.

Nunnenkamp is a former U.S. Marine Corps JAG officer and maintains an active pro bono practice, particularly advocating for veterans seeking benefits and discharge upgrades.

He earned his LL.M. from George Mason University's Scalia Law School, his J.D. from Catholic University of America, and a B.A. from Ohio Wesleyan University.
