

Labour Says Government Refusal to Publish PPE Firm's Contracts Reeks of Cover-Up

"Labour has accused ministers of a potential cover-up over a PPE contract with a company linked to Tory peer Michelle Mone, after the health department refused to release documents connected to the deal, citing commercial sensitivities. The row comes days after the National Crime Agency NCA," reports Peter Walker in The Guardian.

"The row comes days after the National Crime Agency (NCA) searched Mone's home as part of a potential fraud investigation into the company, PPE Medpro, which won more than £200m in government contracts without public tender. Angela Rayner, Labour's deputy leader, wrote to the government in January to seek the release."

Read the article.