

Law School Deans Recently Hit With Noncompliance Notice Say They Can Show Standards Are Met

Two law schools recently received public notice of being out of compliance with ABA accreditation standards, according to a report by the ABA Journal.

The schools are the Western New England University School of Law and the University of the District of Columbia David A. Clarke School of Law.

Deans of the two law schools have said their schools have taken steps to come into compliance with standards, including financial standards in the case of Western New England, and admission standards in the case of Clarke School of Law.
