

Lawyer Battles Sleep Deprivation, Sewage Backup and Media Needling in His Suit Over Election Legality

“Fired in-house lawyer Paul MacNeal Davis isn’t happy with media reporting on his lawsuit that contends that voting changes resulted in an illegal election,” reports Debra Cassens Weiss in ABA Journal’s Daily News.

“As of Monday, Davis had filed eight documents in his lawsuit, while the defendants had not yet responded, Above the Law points out. One filing getting attention—and ridicule—was a request that the government be placed in stewardship, with a nod to Lord of the Rings.”

“Now, Davis is retreating from that request in a Jan. 25 legal filing, but the pundits haven’t eased up. Nor have his troubles, including overwork, threats and vandalism, he says in the filing.”

Read the article.