

Lawyer Suspected in Fatal Shooting at N.J. Federal Judge's Home May Have Been Targeting Another Judge

"The now-deceased lawyer suspected of fatally shooting the son and seriously wounding the husband of U.S. District Court Judge Esther Salas in New Jersey on Sunday may have been targeting at least one other judge in New York," reports Anthony G. Attrino, NJ Advance Media for NJ.com Middlesex County.

Roy Den Hollander had a photo of that state's Chief Judge Janet DiFiore in his car, her spokesman told NJ Advance Media on Tuesday.

"Den Hollander, a self-described anti-feminist lawyer, was found dead in his car of an apparent self-inflicted gunshot wound in Rockland, New York, about a two-hour drive from the North Brunswick home of Salas, officials have said."
