

Lighthouse eDiscovery Announces Web-Based Reporting Tool

Ediscovery services and consulting company Lighthouse eDiscovery has announced the launch of its latest product, Lighthouse Navigate.

The company describes Navigate as a web-based dashboard and reporting tool that gives users on-demand visibility into important case information such as data volumes, cost savings and spend to date.

In a release, the company said:

Lighthouse's new offering provides clients with the tools they need to make informed case decisions, improve budgeting accuracy, as well as implement and monitor effectiveness of cross-matter processes.

Lighthouse recognizes that centralizing and understanding metrics related to ediscovery is challenging due to the lack of transparency and uniformity of reporting both within and across matters. Monitoring trends and conducting evaluations of ediscovery process effectiveness can be hindered by disjointed and delayed receipt of project details. These issues make it difficult for case teams to monitor and forecast their ediscovery spend and labor efficiency across the EDRM, as well as reduce costs and improve project planning.

"Navigate addresses a gaping market need for an enterprise reporting solution that provides users with the ability to view and compare their data, as well as plan and forecast future spend and budgets," said Chris Dahl, vice president of Product Development and Consulting at Lighthouse. "Having access to these insights empowers teams to access and share information that directly addresses their ediscovery program needs.”

Other features of Navigate are:

- Consolidation – Select any one or all matters to see metrics associated with spend, volume and data reduction figures at a glance.
- Configuration – Create, filter and save the combination of reports most relevant.
- Security – Set cascading security permissions to control which projects or types of information are available to each user.
- Mobility – Access project information from any web browser on any device.

Navigate will be available in Q1 exclusively to Lighthouse clients at no additional charge. For more information, contact info@lhediscovery.com.
