Market Spotlight: China Natural Gas

ICIS offers free on-demand presentation slides from a webinar that looks into recent developments in the country and their effects on the global market.

On its website, ICIS says that China’s natural gas market is becoming increasingly attractive to international players due to the introduction of the country’s gas import source diversification policy.

This webinar reviews the latest developments in China and their effects on the global market, specifically in neighboring Asian countries.

The webinar covers:

- A review of recent developments in the country – prices, supply/demand and trading dynamics
- The country’s gas demand levels
- Information on unconventional gas production in China
- Price reforms in Asia and their relation to China’s gas supply
- Analysis of the impact of Chinese natural gas on other global markets

See the presentation slides from the webinar.