

McGeorge Law Says Trial Lawyer's $25 Mln Gift Will Expand Access

"The University of Pacific McGeorge School of Law on Tuesday announced a $30 million influx of cash, thanks to a deep-pocketed donor and university funds, with most of the money earmarked for student scholarships. Alumnus and prominent trial lawyer Robert Eglet, along with his wife and law partner," reports Karen Sloan in Reuters.

"Tracy Eglet, are providing the bulk of the new funding with a $25 million donation to the school. It's the largest single gift in the history of McGeorge Law and the third largest to any California law school on record, according to McGeorge officials. (Chapman University Dale E. Fowler School of Law received $55 million in 2013.)"
