Microsoft President and Chief Legal Officer Brad Smith says the way the U.S. government is treating Huawei is un-American, reports Bloomberg Businessweek.

He said China's leading maker of networking equipment and mobile phones should be allowed to buy U.S. technology, including software from his company, according to Businessweek's Dina Bass.

"U.S. President Donald Trump has said Huawei, run by a former Chinese army technologist, is a national security threat, and his Department of Commerce has added the company to an export blacklist scheduled to take full effect in November," Bass writes.
