

Parker Poe's Lawrence Hershon Named a 'Go To Lawyer' in South Carolina for Business Law

Columbia, S.C. – Parker Poe Adams & Bernstein LLP is pleased to announce that Lawrence Hershon was named to South Carolina Lawyers Weekly's inaugural class of "Go To Lawyers." The publication started the program to identify the top lawyers across the state for certain practice areas, and Hershon was honored for the category of business law.

Hershon and the other Go To Lawyers are "recognized by peers as being well-versed in the nuances of the case law, statutes and regulations clients will encounter," can "think creatively and identify all options for a client," and are the kinds of resources that other lawyers would call if they needed help in that area, according to S.C. Lawyers Weekly.

Hershon provides guidance to clients large and small across a full spectrum of business law issues, including business disputes, construction contracts and litigation, and commercial litigation. He also works with clients on business transactions, including business formation, commercial contract matters, and commercial leases and other real estate matters. In his general business and commercial litigation practice, Hershon works with manufacturers, banks, and others on disputes involving a range of subject matters. He works to resolve complicated business disputes for his clients, through negotiated resolutions when feasible, but also through trial and arbitration when necessary.

Hershon is also a leader at Parker Poe. He serves as the firm's Columbia Office Development Partner.