Patricia Spiccia Joins Quarles & Brady's Tax-Exempt Organizations Practice Group

The national law firm of Quarles & Brady LLP has announced that Patricia Spiccia has joined the firm's Chicago office in its Tax-Exempt Organizations Practice Group.

Spiccia previously externed at Morgan, Lewis & Bockius LLP in the Tax-Exempt Organizations Group. She also served as a judicial extern with the U.S. Courts for the Honorable Magistrate Judge Paul R. Cherry and the Honorable Jon E. DeGuilio. During law school, Patricia was a member of the Moot Court Society and an executive editor of the law review.

She earned her law degree from Valparaiso University School of Law, her bachelor's degree from Indiana University – Bloomington, and her master of laws degree from Georgetown University Law Center.

*About Quarles & Brady LLP

Quarles & Brady is a full-service AmLaw 200 law firm with more than 475 attorneys offering an array of legal services to corporate and individual clients that range from small entrepreneurial businesses to Fortune 100 companies, with practice focuses in health care and life sciences, business law, data privacy and security, and complex litigation. The firm has offices in Chicago; Indianapolis; Madison; Milwaukee; Naples, Florida; Phoenix; Scottsdale; Tampa; Tucson; and Washington, D.C. Additional information can be found online at quarles.com, as well as on Twitter, LinkedIn and Facebook.