

Pepper Hamilton Ordered to Turn Over Baylor Investigation Materials to Plaintiffs' Attorneys

A U.S. district judge has ordered Pepper Hamilton LLP to turn over materials tied to the law firm's 2015-16 investigation that led Baylor University regents to report the school had fundamentally failed in its Title IX implementation duties, reports the Waco Tribune-Herald.

"The significance is we are continuing to get to the bottom of who, what, where and when in regard to the failures at Baylor," said Jim Dunnam, a Waco attorney who represent the 15 plaintiffs.

Plaintiffs' lawyers had filed for a subpoena in March 2017 seeking materials from Pepper Hamilton and in June filed a motion to compel the firm to comply, but the firm did not respond to the request, according to the Tribune-Herald's Phillip Ericksen.
