

Bank Regulators Revive Restrictions on Incentive-Based Compensation

Financial regulators have proposed new rules limiting the incentive pay of employees and other service providers at financial institutions, report Mark Jones and Robert L. Tian of Pillsbury Winthrop Shaw Pittman LLP.

“The new rules seek to establish general requirements applicable to the incentive-based compensation arrangements of covered persons working in covered institutions. Covered persons are any executive officers, employees, directors or principal shareholders who receive incentive-based compensation at a covered institution. Additional restrictions apply to senior executive officers and significant risk-takers,” they write.

Their article discusses the prohibition of excessive compensation, appropriate performance measures, effective controls, approval by the board of directors, and disclosure and record-keeping.
