AAA-ICDR Arbitrator Survey Gives Insight on Cases

The American Arbitration Association and the International Centre for Dispute Resolution have published the results of of survey of more than 400 arbitrators who issued awards for large, complex commercial cases about the various elements of those cases, from motion practice and discovery to cooperation among participants.

A report on the survey is available for downloading at no charge.

The survey revealed exactly how attorneys and their clients negatively affect the efficiency and cost effectiveness of their cases—and the best practices they can adopt to improve.

Download the report.