Discover Drexel’s Online LLM Programs

Drexel University’s online LLM programs from the Thomas R. Kline School of Law can provide a legal practitioner with the expertise needed to become a specialist in either cybersecurity and data privacy or health care and pharmaceutical compliance.

Kline School of Law representatives will answer questions about the program at an online open house on Tuesday, Oct. 22, 2019, at 6 p.m. ET.

The university offers the program online on either a full- or part-time basis.

With a focus on topics like EU data privacy and internet law, this specialized LLM program will help fill a knowledge gap that’s needed in the cyber law and data privacy field, the university says on its website. Participants can tailor elective courses to specific fields such as health care, finance or higher education.

The health care and pharmaceutical industry is increasingly complicated and ever-changing, and Drexel’s LLM program provides insider knowledge needed to successfully navigate the system. Participants can focus on either health care compliance or pharmaceutical compliance or take classes in both areas, according to the university.
