Download: What NOT to Do As a Board Director

The National Association of Corporate Directors has published "A Field Guide to Bad Directors" from NACD Directorship magazine for a close look at the behaviors of the least effective and most distracting directors.

A copy of the article can be downloaded from the NACD website at no charge.

These bad actors suffer from inattention to detail, a narrow field of focus, entitled behavior, and inadequacy, NACD says. Among the 14 types, the "Representative" can't see the big picture and instead focuses on one specific issue. The "Financial Stumbler" is comfortable with basic financial terminology, but becomes lost when the financial discussion turns technical. The "Questioner" claims to ask tough questions but is really hiding a lack of preparation.
