Download: Bringing E-Discovery In House

Zapproved has published a new white paper successfully transitioning from outsourced to in-house e-discovery. The paper is available for free downloading from the company's website.

Corporate counsel face constant pressure to do more with less, Zapproved says on its site. As data stores have ballooned, and as the cost of litigation and compliance investigations has grown, more organizations are looking for ways to lower the cost of e-discovery.

Three in-house legal professionals provide insight for this new In-House Elevated white paper.

Panelists Jack Thompson of Sanofi, Becki Bottemiller of Portland General Electric, and Wendy Riggs of Twitter, Inc. discussed with Jennifer Bantelman of Zapproved, Inc. their thoughts about the benefits of insourcing the discovery process, how to plan for the transition, where to start, how to choose the most helpful technology, what model will work best, and what pitfalls to avoid.
