Download: The Electronic Discovery Management Model – An Updated Approach

Zapproved has published a new Electronic Discovery Management Model that addresses the overarching importance of information governance, advances in legal technology, and the 2015 amendments to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

The updated version can be downloaded from the company's website at no charge.

The original Electronic Discovery Reference Model successfully described the nascent ediscovery process and gave ediscovery practitioners a common language and framework for evolving their own approaches, but a lot has changed since then, Zapproved says on its website.

The company says it grappled with the overarching importance of information governance, advances in legal technology, and the expansion of data identification. It also considered recent changes in legal department operations and the 2015 amendments to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, which sought to stem the tide of out-of-control ediscovery by re-emphasizing proportionality.
