

Ethics Issues in International Arbitration

Practical Law will present a webinar titled “Ethics Issues in International Arbitration” on Thursday, Oct. 6, at 1-2:30 p.m. EDT.

In a release, the company said the seemingly straightforward process of appointing a neutral tribunal of three arbitrators and conducting the hearings may, in fact, give rise to a multitude of issues counsel and their clients must be aware of. How extensively may the parties communicate with their prospective arbitrator? How must the prospective arbitrator comport himself while being interviewed for the appointment? What are the rules regarding counsel’s interactions with witnesses? Are the rules different depending upon the jurisdiction?

Practical Law, the International Institute on Conflict Prevention & Resolution (CPR), and Jenner & Block will present international arbitration experts Richard Ziegler and Noah Hanft discussing ethics in international arbitration.

During this webinar, attendees will be walked through a hypothetical international arbitration, in which the presenters will consider:

- The parameters of party communications with a party-appointed arbitrator.
- The prospective arbitrator’s duties to maintain neutrality.
- Counsel’s duties in dealing with witnesses, including:
 - preparing witnesses for the hearing; and
 - communicating with witnesses after the hearings have started.
- The power of the tribunal to determine and redress ethical violations.

- The same ethical issues if the events occurred in the US.

A short Q&A will follow.

Ethics credit are available in multiple states.
