

Prominent Baltimore Lawyer Snared in Federal Racketeering Case Against Defense Attorney

"A federal grand jury has charged prominent attorney Joshua Treem and a private investigator in the racketeering case against defense attorney Kenneth Ravenell, alleging that they helped conceal Ravenell's conduct by obtaining false statements to protect him," reports Justin Fenton in The Baltimore Sun's Crime.

"Ravenell, 61, has been under indictment since last fall, when he was charged with conspiracy to commit racketeering, money laundering and drug distribution for allegedly covering up and aiding the crimes of a Jamaican marijuana kingpin, Richard Byrd."
