

ProPublica Hires Sarah Matthews as Deputy General Counsel

“ProPublica has hired Sarah Matthews as deputy general counsel. In this role, she will provide day-to-day legal support for the organization’s full range of activities, with emphasis on offering legal services to its newsroom. Matthews comes to ProPublica from the Reporters Committee for Freedom of,” reports Pro Publica in their blog.

“Where she litigated cases involving access to records and proceedings, fought subpoenas and filed amicus briefs on important First Amendment issues. She also led a pre-publication review practice for investigative journalists and supervised the organization’s hotline for journalists. Before joining the Reporters Committee, Matthews.”

Read the article.