

Protecting Your Confidential Information, Relationships and Talent

☒ Michael Elkon of Fisher & Phillips presented a webinar about non-compete agreements, trade secrets and computer protection laws.

The free webinar is now available on-demand.

In a world where employees can take valuable trade secrets on a flash drive that fits on a key chain or using an email that can be the proverbial needle in a haystack of a sent folder, companies have to focus on protecting their trade secrets on the front end, Fisher & Phillips says on its website.

Additionally, in an economy where relationships and information take precedence, it is critical for a company to both retain its employees entrusted with those assets and also effectively recruit talent from competitors in a legally sound manner.
