

Riot Games to Pay $100M in Gender Discrimination Lawsuit Settlement

“The agreement, announced Monday by the California Department of Fair Employment and Housing (DFEH), marks the end of three years of litigation for Riot, a subsidiary of Chinese multinational entertainment conglomerate Tencent and developer of popular video games League of Legends and,” reports Kyle Brasseur in Compliance Week.

“The company must also retain a third party to conduct a gender equity analysis of employee pay, job assignments, and promotions for three years. The DFEH in October 2018 notified Riot of its investigation into allegations of sexual harassment, discrimination, and retaliation against female employees and contractors. When the company.”
