

Sales Associate Needed for GeneralCounselNews.com

For more than a year GeneralCounselNews.com has established itself as one of the most effective marketing vehicles for legal vendors and law firms. Our email campaigns time and again have proved to be the most effective business development tools for our clients. Success has come from providing significant marketing value at competitive rates while producing impressive results and the best customer service in the business. Several campaigns have helped clients generate the highest number of webinar registrations in their histories.

GeneralCounselNews.com seeks an experienced legal advertising sales representative with established contacts among legal vendors and law firms to work from home and sell highly-effective electronic marketing campaigns that generate significant branding, event registrations and whitepaper downloads from general counsel, executives, attorneys, contract managers and energy professionals.

This is a full or part-time contract position based on your availability and desire to make significant commissions from every sale. Prior experience selling electronic advertising to legal vendors and law firms is preferred.

If you are interested in selling a legal marketing product that works, please submit your resume, references and income requirements to Dennis Weber at dweber@generalcounselnews.com. GeneralCounselNews.com is happy to provide personal client references who will confirm our marketing results and customer service are top-notch.
