

Savills North America Appoints New General Counsel

“Savills has named James Repking its general counsel in North America, effective August 1. Repking, formerly associate general counsel, will succeed retiring General Counsel and Executive Vice President L. Stanton Towne. Repking will relocate to the company’s North American headquarters in New,” reports PR Newswire in their blog.

“With significant in-house and private practice experience, James has established himself as an invaluable member of our internal legal team said Mitchell E. Rudin, chairman and CEO, Savills. In a short time, James has demonstrated his ability to advance our strategic priorities and thoughtfully navigate complex issues. We are proud.”
