

Senate Kills Rule On Class-Action Suits Against Financial Companies

The Senate has voted 51-50 to get rid of a banking rule that allows consumers to bring class-action lawsuits against banks and credit card companies to resolve financial disputes, NPR reports.

Vice President Pence cast the tie-breaking vote to rollback the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau rule banning restrictive mandatory arbitration clauses found in the fine print of credit card and checking account agreements, writes NPR reporter Scott Neuman.

President Trump is expected to sign the measure, which has already been approved by the U.S. house.

Neuman writes: "CFPB said it was redressing a situation in which consumers were forced 'to give up or go it alone – usually over small amounts,' while companies were able to 'sidestep the court system, avoid big refunds, and continue harmful practices.'"
