

Site Describes 'Security Farce' at Company That Held Clinton's Emails

A Pennsylvania data backup site that has been revealed to store copies of emails from former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton appears to lack some standard security measures that could protect potentially sensitive communications from Clinton's time in the U.S. State Department, according to a report in the Daily Mail Online.

The site said the facility is owned by Datto Inc. and was part of the network that stored classified messages from the private email server the Democratic presidential candidate used.

The report described doors without visible security, a lack of security patrols, open dumpsters, and no security fence.

Read the report.