The ABA Journal reports that an invasion-of-privacy lawsuit claims that the former general counsel of Wynn Resorts approved a "secret undercover operation" to gather derogatory information about a former salon employee who provided information to the Wall Street Journal.

Plaintiffs claim that former Wynn general counsel Kim Sinatra was part of a civil conspiracy targeting Jorgen Nielsen, the former artistic director of a salon at Wynn Las Vegas.

The Journal's Debra Cassens Weiss reports: "The suit alleges that Sinatra and two other defendants participated in a plan to send 'an undercover operative' posing as a client to the new salon that employed Nielsen. The place was the salon at Palms Casino Resort."
