Suit By 22 State Attorneys General Seeks to Block FCC's Net Neutrality Repeal

A group of 22 Democratic state attorneys general, including those from California and New York, filed a lawsuit Tuesday seeking to block the Federal Communications Commission's repeal of tough net neutrality rules for online traffic, according to The Los Angeles Times.

The AGs' complaint argues that the vote last month by the Republican-controlled FCC was an "arbitrary and capricious" change to regulations, writes reporter Jim Puzzanghera.

"The repeal of net neutrality would turn internet service providers into gatekeepers, allowing them to put profits over consumers while controlling what we see, what we do and what we say online," said New York Atty. Gen. Eric T. Schneiderman, who is leading the suit.

Read the LA Times article.