

Supreme Court Hands Rare Win for Workers in Arbitration Case

News

Under the nearly 100-year-old Federal Arbitration Act, which is generally presumed to favor employers, thousands of truck drivers who are employed as independent contractors cannot be forced into private arbitration.

Patent Trolls v. Transportation Companies – Contract Tips to Help Avoid Paying the Toll

Insight

Transportation companies have become prime targets for patent infringement lawsuits in recent years, write Jonathan Todd and Justin P. Clark for Benesch, Friedlander, Coplan & Aronoff.