

Takeda's Baxalta Settles with Bayer Over $173M Hemophilia Patent Infringement Verdict

"Takeda subsidiary Baxalta has spent more than two years pushing back against the $173 million in damages it was ordered to pay as a result of Bayer's hemophilia patent infringement lawsuit. But after an appeals win for Bayer in March, the companies are putting the case to rest," reports Noah Higgins-Dunn in Fierce Pharma's Pharma.

"The two drugmakers, along with Nektar Therapeutics, have entered into a settlement agreement over the patent infringement case, a court filing shows. Bayer will not seek claims for the many millions in damages it was owed under a 2019 verdict and a subsequent appeals ruling."

"Under the latest settlement, each drugmaker will cover their own legal expenses and Baxalta will give up its right to appeal the 2019 verdict any further. The filings didn't provide other details on the terms of the settlement."

Read the article.