

Ted Lasso stars, Writers Get Massive Paydays in Renegotiated Season 3 Contracts

“With an impressive 20 Emmy nominations, Ted Lasso was a definitive hit for the streaming service going into the currently airing Season 2. The immense hype surrounding what’s been called one of TV’s most positive shows made it easy for the studio to greenlight a third season in October before Season,” reports Tyler McCarthy in Fox Business.

“Now, according to The Hollywood Reporter, the writers and cast underwent a round of contract negotiations, this time with the leverage of multiple Emmy nominations a Peabody Award and incredibly positive word of mouth. Brendan Hunt and Brett Goldstein made out particularly well in the renegotiations given that they both write.”

Read the article.