

The Gig Is Over for Texas Judge Convicted of Taking Lawyer's Bribes

A Texas judge faces decades in prison after a federal jury convicted him Thursday of taking bribes from an attorney, including a $15,000 pickup truck and an envelope stuffed with $5,500, according to a Courthouse News Service report.

Rodolfo "Rudy" Delgado, 65, of Edinburg, resigned from the 93rd District Court in Hidalgo County after a federal grand jury returned a six-count indictment in February 2018, according to Courthouse News reporter Cameron Langford.

The Brownsville Herald reported that Edinburg attorney Noe Perez testified during Delgado's five-day trial that after a client paid for his services with a $15,000 pickup truck in 2008, Delgado learned of the deal and asked him about the truck's condition, then took the truck and never paid for it.
