

'They Are Blaming Us': Contract Fight Threatens Springfield Symphony Orchestra Season

"The Springfield Symphony Orchestra board and its musicians are waging a public debate over union contracts, including the length of the upcoming season," post Jill Kaufman in Wbur

"The SSO, touted as Massachusetts' largest symphony outside Boston, faces many financial challenges, according to its board. And they say the problems existed well before the pandemic."

Read the article.