

Top Biglaw Firm Returns to the Office with Mandatory Tuesday-Thursday Attendance

“Davis Polk announced its new return to office policy late last week. As the whole Biglaw world waits to see which reopening plan becomes the new normal, DPW adopted an approach that maintains a work from home element while mandating full office attendance on certain days to facilitate the in,” reports Joe Patrice in Above The Law.

“It seems to me that three to four days a week and mandating attendance for three specific days means lawyers are going to work three days a week. Not that there’s anything wrong with that, but that’s what’s going to happen. On the one hand, there’s a value to guaranteeing that everyone is in the office at the same time. On the other hand, is there.”

Read the article.