

Trial & Appellate Lawyer Marc Fuller Joins Jackson Walker in Dallas as Partner

DALLAS – Marc Fuller, an experienced trial and appellate lawyer with an impressive track record of successfully defending media outlets, has joined Jackson Walker in Dallas as a partner.

Licensed to practice in California and Texas, Mr. Fuller focuses on media and First Amendment disputes, class actions, and appeals.

“We are thrilled to have Marc join our litigation team,” said Ross Forbes, who chairs the Firm’s Trial & Appellate Litigation practice. “He’s a smart, experienced, and talented litigator whose practice complements what we do. Many of us have worked with Marc over the years and believe he’s a great fit for Jackson Walker.”

Mr. Fuller’s media litigation experience includes defamation, privacy, copyright, and other disputes over content and newsgathering. He has extensive experience representing technology companies and online services in disputes over content moderation, user anonymity, and digital privacy. Marc has also handled a broad range of litigation for nonmedia companies, focusing on appeals, class actions, and First Amendment matters. He has authored amicus briefs in media and First Amendment cases in the Texas Supreme Court, Fifth Circuit, and U.S. Supreme Court.

“I have long respected and admired Jackson Walker’s litigation practice, which includes some of the most talented and accomplished media and class action litigators in the country,” Mr. Fuller said. “I’m excited and honored to be a part of this outstanding team.”

After earning his law degree from Stanford Law School, Mr. Fuller clerked for U.S. District Judge Sidney Fitzwater and U.S. appeals court Judge Fortunato P. Benavides at the Fifth Circuit.
