

Trump, Democratic Candidates Lean on Two Biglaw Firms

Donald Trump's re-election campaign paid his go-to law firm nearly $1 million for consulting in the latest quarter, nearly double the amount spent by Democratic presidential candidates on legal services from their leading firm reports Bloomberg Law.

"Jones Day received nearly $975,000 from Trump's team in the latest period to raise its fee total this year to more than $2.2 million," writes Bloomberg's Roy Strom. "Perkins Coie picked up just over $500,000 in the quarter from Democrats vying for the nomination, Federal Election Commission records reviewed by Bloomberg Law show."

Some other firms representing Democratic candidates include Covington & Burling; Jenner & Block; Garvey Schubert Barer; Trister, Ross, Schadler & Gold; and Sandler, Reiff, Lamb, Rosenstein & Birkenstock.

Read the Bloomberg Law article.