

Two Atheria Law Attorneys Elevated to Partnership

Atheria Law is pleased to announce that Andrew Chan and Joshua Leach have been elected to the firm's partnership. The Technology, Privacy, and Cyber team has had the pleasure of working with Andrew and Josh for many years, and both have demonstrated an exceptional level of leadership and service to our clients. We congratulate them on their commitment to the firm's culture of transparency and mentorship, and welcome them to the partnership.

"We are incredibly proud of these talented attorneys and recognize the experience and energy they bring to the partnership," said Atheria Law founding partner Christina Terplan. "Our firm is fortunate to have such skilled attorneys and we look forward to their continued commitment to excellence in serving our clients and building a rewarding and positive environment in which to work."

Andrew represents London and U.S. insurers and focuses his practice on complex technology, media, and cyber matters. His practice includes providing insurance coverage advice, risk mitigation, and litigation management on matters involving data breaches, consumer privacy class actions, intellectual property disputes, and regulatory investigations.

Josh advises cyber insurers regarding coverage for losses and claims arising from breach events and facilitates front-line incident response. With more than two decades of experience representing insurers, Josh's experience also includes litigation arising out of disputes over the nature and extent of insurance coverage, insurance bad faith, and contribution and subrogation amongst insurers.
