

Two Wells Fargo Execs, Including HR Lawyer, Out After Scandal

The former head of a Wells Fargo legal department responsible for employment matters is one of two high-ranking executives who are no longer with the company, reports The Charlotte Observer.

The executive changes are the latest at the top of the bank since a sales scandal broke more than a year ago.

The former legal department group head is Deanna Lindquist. The other former executive mentioned in Deon Roberts' report is Tracy Kidd, who was head of human resources for Wells' community banking segment in Charlotte, NC.

Read the Observer article.