

Uniontown Lawyer Accused of Orchestrating Scheme to 'Clean' Drug Money, For A Fee

"A tip to an FBI hotline launched an eight-month investigation by the state police organized crime unit that ended this week with a Uniontown lawyer being accused of offering to launder drug money for clients." reports Paul Peirce in TRIBLIVE's Regional News.

"Authorities on Thursday arrested Tancredi Calabrese, 32, who is charged with dealing in the proceeds of unlawful activities, criminal attempt to deal in the proceeds of unlawful activities, unsworn falsification to authorities and tampering with public records. He is free on $50,000 unsecured bond. A preliminary hearing is scheduled Feb. 26."

"The investigation began in June after the FBI received a tip about Calabrese's alleged activity, Trooper Craig Yauch reported in court documents."
