Walmart Hires Former Prosecutor for Ethics Job

Bloomberg Law reports that Walmart has hired former Justice Department prosecutor David Searle as its international ethics and compliance officer.

The former assistant U.S. attorney prosecuted cases involving fraud, money laundering, extortion, export violations, worksite violations and human trafficking, as well as evaluating corporate compliance programs to make sure they conformed with the law.

Bloomberg's Elizabeth Olson writes that Walmart has been adding experienced lawyers in recent months, hiring three female general counsel since last year, starting with Rachel Brand, formerly No. 3 at the Justice Department.
