

Who has the best and worst contracts on the Chicago Bears?

“Like every team, the Chicago Bears have both underpaid and overpaid players. But every contract is unique, and there are varying degrees of underpaid and overpaid. Pro Football Focus recently conducted a review of all 32 teams and identified which players on each roster have the best and worst contracts. It should come as no surprise that Jimmy Graham was the pick for the worst contract on the Bears,” reports Bryan Perez in Bears Wire.

“Graham was a cap casualty of the division rival Green Bay Packers after the 2019 season, with his 53.6 grade ranking 57th among tight ends with at least 100 snaps that year. The Chicago Bears inexplicably signed him to a top-of-market contract that included a no-trade clause as they continued their quest to rectify a position group that has given them headaches for years.”

Read the article.