Winter 2015-2016 – Good Tidings Ahead?

Platts has posted an on-demand webinar reviewing the natural gas markets winter-to-date and a taking forward look at the first quarter of 2016. Storage started the winter at all-time record levels and prices have seen dollar handles, but with a strong El Nino in effect, what will the beginning of 2016 have in store?

Analysts Jeff Moore and Bob Yu discuss:

- Storage: How will year-ending storage inventories look? Will we reach capacity in 2016?
- Prices: What's the price outlook for the beginning of next year? Could 2016 be the first year on the road to recovery?
- Demand: How are freeze-offs affecting winter production? When will LNG demand show up in 2016?
- Weather: How is El Nino affecting the energy markets so far? What are some scenarios for 2016?
