Womble Expands Corporate Practice in Atlanta

ATLANTA (March 6, 2024) – Womble Bond Dickinson today announced that partner James H. Andros has rejoined the Corporate & Securities Group in Atlanta. Andros advises clients on domestic and international corporate, transactional, and financing matters, including mergers, acquisitions, divestitures, recapitalizations, capital raises, restructurings, joint ventures, and succession planning.

Andros has served as outside counsel for clients ranging from emerging growth to mature public and private companies. He also advises high-net-worth individuals, family-held enterprises, private equity groups, investment bankers, business owners, C-suite executives, boards of directors, committees, and family offices.

“Jim is well known by many of our partners and a respected member of the Atlanta legal community,” said Joel Pieper, managing partner of the Atlanta office. “He brings significant experience that will strengthen our corporate bench, and we are excited to welcome him back to Womble.”

This addition reflects continued momentum for the Corporate Group, which has welcomed a string of notable partners in the last 12 months, including Hideki Akiyama (Raleigh, North Carolina), Scot Anderson (Denver), Tracy Bacigalupo (New York City), Al Broadbent (Charlottesville, Virginia), Rich Cameron (Washington, D.C.), Howard Herndon (Nashville), Cherylyn Harley LeBon (Tysons, Virginia), David Vance Lucas (Huntsville, Alabama), and Raj Singh (Tysons, Virginia).

Andros was a partner at Womble from 1998 to 2009. He rejoins the Firm from Parker, Hudson, Rainer & Dobbs alongside associate Robert Thrasher. Thrasher's practice focuses on general corporate transactions, including structuring, negotiating, and drafting documents. His experience includes domestic and international mergers and acquisitions, divestitures, joint ventures, and corporate governance matters.
